CCF Club Plans Are Explained

Education, research and speakers will be the basic elements of this year's program of the CCF club, vice president Jerry Charney said yesterday.

Speaking at the opening meeting in the Union, he said leading members of the Canadian socialistic world would be present at meetings to "help us understand even better the essentials of socialistic democracy."

He said the educational aspect of the program would be realized by frequent gatherings at which everyone would participate in discussions.

Debating Trials Star Sex, Politics

By Ruth Roskies

Love, marriage, and ideologies were the subjects of the Senior Debating trials held yesterday in the Union. The debaters, speaking both seriously and humorously, provided, according to judge Daniel Kingstone, "a very entertaining afternoon."

Mr. Kingstone and Avrum Cohen, B.A., the judges, awarded the decision to Ralph Ordower, who spoke on the affirmative of the resolution, "Resolved that two conflicting ideologies cannot remain in a state of peaceful coexistence". Ordower traced the pattern of conflict from the creation of the world, showing that ever since Eve and the Lord disagreed on the function of an apple, two ideologies have never coexisted on a peaceful basis. He cited the case of Cain and Abel, and the religious conflicts of the middle ages.

Continual Conflict

He said that in the world today, it is virtually impossible for capitalism and communism to exist without conflict between the two.

Blema Solomon, runner up in the contest, affirmed that "the modern trend toward equality between the sexes is a serious threat to harmonious marriage". She maintained that men should recognize the superiority of the fair sex, and not attempt to usurp its position.

Miss Solomon said the move towards shorter working hours, and the increased interest the men of the family take in rearing children, prove that men have always been envious of women, and are trying to take their place.

Phil Shaposnick, next on the judges' list, also spoke on this subject, but naturally considered the men to be the superior sex, and women the usurpers. He insisted that the man remain the one who earns the bread, and woman the one who burns it. He gave the example of a government which must have a head, and ended in a plea to the men, "We must remain on top".

sure, saying the motion was "completely unjust" and contending that "councillors used their position to express a mere personal opinion."

The Ubysey claimed "non-Caucasian girls are struck off a list of names used by Pan-Hellenic to issue invitations to co-eds asking them to join UBC sororities."

Strictly Local Affair

Miss White said, "This is not true at McGill," and added: "Any (Continued on Page 4)

UBC DISCRIMINATION POLICY DENIED HERE

By Lois Lieff and Marty Goodman

There is no discrimination policy in the McGill Pan-Hellenic Council — a charge recently levied against the University of British Columbia branch.

Agnes White, president of the Council, governing body of McGill's sororities, told The Daily last night that the "cosmopolitan group making up the university would not allow such a situation."

She said any such policy would be "laughed right out of the country."

The Ubysey, student newspaper at the Vancouver college, followed up an expose of discrimination among fraternities there with a scathing blast at the sororities' refusal to rush colored girls.

In between the two stories, the UBC Student Council censured The Ubysey "for the poor taste employed" in the expose of the fraternities.

Term Motion 'Unjust'

The paper then asked the Council to rescind the motion of cen-

Toronto, Oct. 21. — A national campaign for government scholarships was passed unanimously today as the National Federation of Canadian University Students moved into plenary session.

The motion proposed by the University of Toronto and seconded by Laval further stated that

(B) The basis of the campaign to be conducted by each university in its own area should, it is recommended, be an approach to the public for support of student requests for government scholarships and bursaries as well as direct requests to government and the enlisting of students support.

(C) This campaign shall be conducted in such a way as to take into account the fact that provinces may or may not make an arrangement with the Federal Government for the provision of adequate scholarships and bursaries. If the latter alternative prevailed the Federal Government and the Provincial Governments affected will be urged to negotiate agreement whereby more scholarships and bursaries for students in such provinces may be financed."

Enthusiastically Endorsed

The resolution, a major item in the National Program of NFCUS for this year, was enthusiastically endorsed by speakers from all legions and passed unanimously.

In international affairs a vote of censure was passed by the International Affairs Commission on The Varsity for their coverage of IAC debates on membership in the International Union of Students.

Headline Said Misleading

The Commission objected particularly to the headline in The Varsity (student newspaper of the U of T) which read "International Commission Approves IUS Membership." The lead paragraph of the story, according to members of the Commission, also gave a false impression. Clyde Batten, editor of The Varsity, denied that the article and headline were misleading.

The International Affairs Commission did in fact approve two motions, one rejecting associate membership in the IUS at this time and the other empowering NFCUS delegation of observers to the next IUS conference to take out full membership for NFCUS should the IUS meet four stated conditions. Both motions are subject to ratification in plenary session.

Approve Tax Deduction

In national affairs the plenary session also approved action to obtain income tax deductions for university tuition and contact with "the appropriate employment agencies" by the national office with the view to circulating information on summer job opportunities.

McGill was mandated to organize a national short story contest for NFCUS and to hold a regional seminar sometime this year. The seminar would be attended by Quebec and Ottawa universities and costs would be borne mainly by participants with NFCUS contributing not more than $200.

A McGill resolution requiring monthly reports by the national office on progress of these mandates was among other resolutions approved by the plenary session.

Tomorrow will see presentation of reports by the administration and finance commission and by the International Affairs Commission.

Preparations Completed For Weekend

Preparations were completed yesterday for the Toronto football weekend — traditionally the major Saturday of the season.

A large contingent of students is expected to be on hand at Windsor Station at 10.15 pm tonight when the Varsity gridders arrive. Members of the McGill band will provide musical accompaniment.

The Varsity Drag will be featured Saturday night, along with a tea dance immediately after the game.

Joy Neilson Star

The Drag starts at 9 pm in the Currie gym, and will star Joy Neilson's all girl orchestra.

One of the features will be a Lead the Band contest, patterned after Sammy Kaye's successful idea. Volunteers will try their hand at leading the band, and the winner will be chosen by the crowd's applause. Several prizes have been donated for the evening.

The tea dance will be held at the Union, patterned after other successful ones held this year.

A luncheon will be held at RVC before the game for non-resident girls. Cost of the meal will be 50c. Admission to the tea dance is 25c, and to the Varsity Drag $1.

Radio Workshop Will Start Nov. 2

McGill Radio Workshop will begin meeting Tuesday, Nov. 2, chairman Lawrence Cohen announced yesterday.

At the club's opening meeting, he explained the program to over 70 members. He described past courses, and said the group would meet weekly at station CFCF.

Later the executive met with station program manager Mike Wood to iron out details for the year.

AN ENCOURAGING DEVELOPMENT

The resolution urging increased government scholarships, together with the fact that it was possible to get the support of every Canadian university for this resolution, is perhaps the most encouraging development in this year's NFCUS conference.

For the first time concrete action is proposed in this field and it is just this that previous NFCUS resolutions have lacked. Rather than expressing the customary pious hope that the government will soon see fit to provide us with more scholarships, it is at last proposed that we do something about it.

The field of action which was chosen is, we think, an appropriate one. Government scholarships and bursaries are, or ought to be, of vital concern to Canadian students and it is just such a fundamental issue that it is the Federation's job to tackle.

Whether this campaign will succeed is doubtful. Students in Canada are not and will never be the powerful political force that they are in other countries of the world and a NFCUS decision is unlikely to bring about any change in government policy. We doubt if it would be a good thing to have Canadian students a really powerful lobby. But their lack of power does not relieve NFCUS of its responsibility to make an effort.

We think that the motion as passed is a good one. For once it is a concrete proposal for definite action with a definite purpose. It is a pity that this cannot be said of more NFCUS resolutions.

May I Ask . . .

ABOUT NFCUS

Last year The Daily instituted a "May I Ask . . ." section of the Editorial page in which students had a chance to question elected members of the Students' Executive Council and officials of other student organizations as to what they and their organizations were doing.

With this issue of The Daily, "May I Ask . . ." begins a second year. We hope that it will be of interest and that students will take advantage of this opportunity to direct pointed questions at their representatives and officials.

Questions must be signed even though a pen name is to be used in print. Letters should be addressed to the Executive Editor, and may be left at the Union Tuckshop.

Questions from Jim Robb, Law 4.

Answered by Alison Knox, Minister of External Affairs, SEC.

QUESTION: In view of NFCUS' performance during the last year, do you still believe a fee raise is necessary?

ANSWER: This is a question that could well have some pertinence if it were asked one calendar year from now: at present it is meaningless. The reason for this is that last year NFCUS was still getting along on the twenty cents per member budget. The question obviously implies, "What has NFCUS done with its fifty cent fee?", but as NFCUS will only begin this year to have a fifty cent per member budget, the question is clearly premature. Mr. Robb may remember that I asked the McGill Students' Society for the fifty cent per member fee only at the final meeting of the Students' Society last year, shortly before this campus, along with every other campus, closed down to study for examinations. What the NFCUS Conference plans this week in Toronto, and how these plans are implemented, will show whether the fifty cent fee is justified.

QUESTION: Do you believe a national Canadian student organization can ever work?

ANSWER: Why not? Is there any anthropological evidence that Canadians are an inferior race? If so, I stand corrected, otherwise I see no reason why we can't have an effective national student organization here, as in many other countries.

It is true that any national student organization has to be adapted to local conditions. For instance, in Canada, we can't hope to have the tremendous success and tightly-knit organization of the British NUS. There, every university is within a few hours of every other: our universities stretch across a vast continent. We Canadian students are not a homogeneous group, we don't all speak the same language, and the expense of getting us together in one place for a conference is enormous. The distance between us will always hamper our activities, because nothing is dealt with so well by letter as by a face-to-face meeting or a telephone call. Distance is NFCUS' biggest enemy, far more formidable than the sceptics who think we should drop the matter of NFCUS as a bad job.

However, despite the NFCUS difficulties of heterogeneity and distance, I believe a Canadian student organization can work. By the very fact that we are all students, we have similar interests, and especially, similar financial difficulties. We all want more scholarships, lower fees, lower transportation costs; many of us want summer jobs, many of us are interested in national art, literature, sport, and debating competition. By the very fact that we have different regional personalities in Canada, our contact with students from other universities is that much more interesting. We need seminars and conferences to bring students together, to promote a cognizance of a national student community to keep alive a Canadian way of looking at things which allows for individual and racial differences in the face of the conformity influx from the south.

All these things and more we want and need as students. I hope the NFCUS Conference this week will bring us toward these goals. We have gone down to Toronto, not with a panacea, but with certain concrete proposals of how to start on our way. These goals will not be achieved this year, or next year; it will take several years to build up NFCUS, but this year we hope to make a start. The organizational difficulties are immense, it is true: we must not allow them to become overwhelming.

Lutherans Talk On Christianity

The Lutheran Students' Association yesterday held a general discussion on Christian belief and the validity of Christianity.

The meeting, under the leadership of Rev. E. Velebir, was a followup to the symposium on prayer and prayer.

The essence of the discussion was the first three petitions of the Lord's Prayer.

Letters to the Editor

On To The Race!

Dear Sir:

Now at last we have a real fight avec Les Carabins. In yesterday's Daily there appeared a letter from Guy da Silva, Chairman of the U of M Blood Donor Clinic, challenging McGill to a bloody race—the 'noive' of dem.

Well, look, we have a real tradition to uphold here at McGill. Let's all get out and defend it! Last year only 38% of McGill students gave their blood. Realizing that possibly 22% could not give their blood for medical reasons, 40% of McGill students were too "preoccupied" to give their blood.

It's easy, it's fast, it's painless, and it's fun, so let's all get out and give — the human way.

Pete Abbott,
Chairman McGill Blood
Donor Clinic

A Protest

Dear Sir:

We would like to protest the method used for figuring out the percentage of blood donors in the faculties. None of the undergraduate societies seems to want to take into consideration a very important reason for the low percentage of donors in some faculties viz: "All donors must be between the ages of 18 and 65."

Although this rule would not exclude any students in Medicine or Law, and would exclude only a small percentage of Engineers (Engineering is a five-year course), it would probably exclude about three-quarters of the frosh in Arts and Science, and about one-third of the sophomores. We are all affected by this rule in our first year.

Therefore, we propose that in determining faculty percentages, the percentages should be of eligible donors. (Students' ages can be obtained at the Registrar's office.) We are sure that the results would put a different light on the whole competition.

To Mr. Sheppard

Dear Sir:

To Claude-Armand Sheppard—Are you frustrated? Socially insecure? Emotionally maladjusted? Perhaps you're using the wrong toothpaste?

If, as you say, you can't stand "the lumbering bulk, the vapid mass of colourless beings who, while pretending to be all at once women . . . do not even succeed in being interesting, let alone women", then why do you spend your time finding out that they are good dancers; they kiss well, and petting with them can be very enjoyable? You say that you look closely at them on the campus, in the lecture hall, and in the bus; but why not look past their "cosmetized bodies", stop "vigorously squeezing them", stop listening to "their endless babble" and find yourself a girl (and there ARE some left) who is a product of nature, not a beauty salon . . . although we doubt that she's got near you anyway.

Take heart, Mr. Sheppard, for these rocket ships they're working on will soon travel to Mars. They say there are people there, and even if there aren't, we're sure you'd fit in splendidly.

MC GILL MEETS VARSITY

Bob Masterson and his senior Varsity Blues invade Molson Oval this Saturday afternoon hungry for their first intercollegiate football victory of the season. The Blues, pre-season favorites for the championship, tied Western 9-9 in their first collegiate duel and were upset by Queen's 20-0 last Saturday.

Larry Sullivan has emphasized defensive tactics in this week's practices and it is hoped the Redmen will be able to meet the Varsity challenge. Earl Merling, veteran linesman from last year's seniors has just rejoined the team and undoubtedly his services will be greatly appreciated. Earl stands well over six feet and weighs 240 odd pounds.

Another ace up the Sullivan sleeve will be a new passing offensive. So far this season the Redmen have more or less left all the passing to their opponents. This new twist just may surprise the favored Blues.

Phil "The Crusher" Muntz, Steve Oneschuck, and Bill Pinkney will spearhead the Varsity rushing attack. Muntz, a sensation at the fullback slot, is probably well remembered by McGill fans through

Engineers Victors

Garnering the most points for Engineering were George Barclay, who racked up firsts in the 880, the mile and the 440; and Bill Duanne, winner of the 220 and the 100 yard dash.

Two new Intramural records were set: in the 16 lb. shot put by V. Kalins, an Engineer, who clipped the old record 3¼ inches; and by G. Mersereau of Arts and Science, who ran 3 miles in 10 seconds faster than the old record.

discrimination is strictly a local affair."

In the fraternity issue, The Ubysey had printed the names of the three fraternities on the campus with discriminatory clauses in their constitutions.

It added that the names were being revealed "for the information of students who are now rushing fraternities."

Object to Manner

President Dick Underhill of the Alma Mater Society said: "We have no objection to The Ubysey printing the names of the three fraternities, only to the manner in which it was done."

McGill Intra Fraternity Council president Hugh Faulkner said it was not an affair of the IFC.

"It has never been an issue at the council," he said, but is "up to the individual fraternities."

Secretary Ron Fagan said several fraternities here do have segregation clauses in their national constitutions, because of the "complaints of southern chapters."

Stems From Frat 'Law'

He said that by fraternity "law," any member of a particular group can visit the house of another chapter in the same group, and "southerners wouldn't appreciate having a colored boy visit them."

He added there is no opposition to a colored boy joining a fraternity here.

Apparently the sororities at UBC had assumed a "holier than thou" attitude after the fraternity fracas, saying "We have no clauses." But the expose of their discriminatory actions has put the shoe on the other foot.
